FOR THE LOVE OF COFFEE

As both a leader and sideman, trumpeter Glenn Makos has performed at New York area jazz clubs, including Birdland, The Blue Note, Zinc Bar, Shrine, Silvana, and The Knitting Factory. His new group BRŪ, explores eclectic grooves influenced by samba, funk, hip-hop, and jazz. He is joined by alto and soprano saxophonist Craig Yaremko, Victor Lin on Fender Rhodes, electric bassist Sebastian de Urquiza, and Daniel Silva on drums. Their upcoming album, Arrowsic on Stop Time Records, is being released in December of 2025.

BRŪ is inspired by Glenn's love of coffee, which led him to roasting coffee beans at home. He began to explore various beans from around the world and he noticed distinctive characteristics among the coffee beans from various regions. As a result, many of the tunes written on this album reflect those flavors. Sulawesi is one such composition. The underlying opening rhythm perpetuates a caffeine- like energy. That sets up a melody that offers a complex, rich texture, like the coffee.

The opening montuno in Adjuntas brings the hillside flavor of the beans grown in the town of the same name. And yet, this project is also an eclectic mix of grooves and ingredients to produce a unique flavor.

Glenn heard Victor's Fender Rhodes sound, Daniel's unique drum voice grown from Brazil, and Sebastian's electric bass as a vital part of his concept. Craig's high energy alto sax playing combined with Glenn's unique trumpet sound and approach provide the elements that create an exciting band exploring new material.

So, kick back with your favorite beans or beverage and enjoy the sounds!
